Reference was then made to the bill providing for the reduction in the price of gas, which was drawn by said committee, and passed by the House of Representatives through its agency. Mr. Tucker also reported that the bill providing for the extensions of the Columbia railway and the bill incorporating the East Washington Belt Line Railway Company, both of which had been approved by the asso-ciation, had been favorably reported by

> A Shakespeare Memorial Window. It will be of interest to all Americans to krow that one object of the visit to this country of Rev. G. Arbuthnot, who lectures this evening before the National Geographic Society at Rifles' Armory, is to collect funds for a handsome American memorial window to Shakespeare in the old church at Stratford-on-Avon. By means of individual subscriptions and sums received from the sale of photographs, copies of the registers of the old church, and other mementoes of the birthplace of the great poet, the Rev. Mr. Arbuthnot is collecting a sum which will, it is confidently expected, make the American memorial window at Stratford-on-Avon second to none in that historic building, which, by the way, dates back to the thirteenth century.

President and Mrs. Cleveland were at home last night to the army, navy and marine corps, and the levee in honor of these three branches of the nation's defenders was a brilliant event, attended by perhaps a larger company than has gathered before this winter at the White House. The early birds were very much in evidence and were warm and comfortable strolling through the corridors and parlors when the late-comers came in shivering with the cold from their enforced wait in their carriages before they could approach the mansion. An eye trained to effects found much that was interesting in viewing the outside scene. About 10 o'clock a line of carriages, stretched out like a serpent clear down to 15th street, was slowly wending its way to the portico. A double row of carriages encircled the drive and lined the avenue on either side, while the lights from the house and conservatory made the home of the President stand out clear from its snowy surroundings. The reception began precisely at 9. The descent of the receiving party was preceded by that of Secretary Herbert escorting Mrs. Perine, and Postmaster General Bissell with Miss Benedict, who arrived yesterday to be Mrs. Cleveland's guest. Mrs. Bissell, who has a bad cold, and Miss Herbert were not present at the reception. President and Mrs. Cleveland were assisted by Mrs. Gresham, Mrs. Carlisle, Mrs. Lamont, Mrs. Olrey and Miss Morton. All the members of the cabinet were present and were in the blue parlor when the reception began. Colonel Wilson and Lieutenant Gilmore made the introductions, and during the first hour the incoming line never wavered for a moment. The reception, in fact, kept up briskly until after 10:30, when a number of guests having taken their departure the immense throng in the corridors and east room could move about with a degree more of comfort. The gowns worn were par-ticularly fine also, and the scene, with the abundance of military uniforms, lacked no element of brilliancy. The representation of army and navy officers, young and old, was very large and a most complimentary feature of the evening. There were stars of yellow roses and anchors of red ones on the flower-decked mantels of the east room and in the electric light effects, over the corridor door, a star and an anchor in red, white and blue lights. Mrs. Cleveland wore an extremely becoming gown of pink satin spangled in gold. The bodice fitted high on the shoulders and big rosettes in chiffon finished off the tops of the sleeves. A diamond tiara was worn and a diamond neck-

Lieut, Gen. Schofield and Mrs. Schofield were the observed of all when they entered shortly after the reception commenced. Admiral and Mrs. Ramsay were also present. Malt Whisky has established itself firmly in the estern of physicians, and laymen, feeling its strengthening influence, wonder what they would do without it in these bleak winter days, when grip is in the air.

Nobody need try to do without it, for grocers and druggists always have it in stock, knowing that confidence in its usefulness has bred a steady demand for it. Doctors differ as to the final demand for it. Doctors differ as to the final effect of certain remedies. There are only a few, the value of which is beyond dispute. Mrs. Victor Kauffmann will not be at home tomorrow afternoon. Chester I. Long of Kansas, and Congressman-elect from the "big seventh," the largest congressional district in the United States, now represented by Jerry Simpson, and Miss French of Paola, Kan., were married yesterday, and the wedding trip will bring them to Washington. Mr. Long is a young man, just turned thirty, bright and decidedly handsome in the brunette style. His young wife is said to be a lady of rare accomplishments, and will be of material assistance to him, both n a social and political way. Mr. Long is a lawyer, as are all the new members of the next Kansas delegation in Congress, and has had considerable experience in legislative work, having represented his senatorial district in the state legislature four years ago. His home is at Medicine Lodge, a few doors from that of Mr. Simpson, whom he defeated for re-election. Mr. Long is an ardent free silver man and a high protectionist. Last night a masquerade surprise was tendered to Mr. and Mrs. Shaw of Good Hope by a party of twenty, who assem-bled at the residence of Miss Kirper, 6th and G streets southeast, where a herdic awaited the party at 8 o'clock. The journey as far as Union Town was en-joyed by all, but upon traversing the hills on the outskirts of the city their travel was interrupted frequently by drifts of snow, which blockaded the road. It was necessary for the gentlemen to get off occasionally and push, in order to start the herdic. The party reached their destina-tion at 10 o'clock. The large fires at the Shaw residence were very much appre-ciated by every one, and after becoming thoroughly warmed dancing and singing were enjoyed. At midnight the table in the spacious dining room was filled with a dainty as well as substantial luncheon.

MOSTLY VAGRANTS.

Line of These Gentlemen in the Police Court.

Four white men and one woman were in Judge Kimball's procession this morning and most of them had been in trouble before. Jane Gannon, the woman, was in faires at the City of Mexico, announcing the lead, and she promptly informed the court that she was innocent of the charge of vagrancy. Jane has been in court so many times that she is almost a fixture. Liquor is the cause of her trouble and her inability to control her appetite has resulted in her separation from her husband and children, and now she spends most of her time on the farm. Tuesday she was set free by reason of the expiration of her sentence, and last evening she was found on the street by Policeman Kimmell. "I found her wandering about the streets," the officer told the court, "and I'm not certain whether she had been drinking or whether her mind is affected. "The court understands all about Jane." was the judge's remark. "When did you get out?" he asked her.

"Tuesday," she answered.

Jane had very little to say, and the judge sent her down for a month. Next in order came Mike Lanhady, another individual who is as well-known in court as are the employes. Mike is a pensioner, and since his last appearance in court he has treated himself to a new suit of clothes. He got drunk last night and went to the police station dressed in his new suit of clothes. Knowing the location of the cells as well as the officers, Mike walked back and selected the one which he wanted to occupy, not stopping in the office to register his name, age and occupation. This was not necessary however, for Mike was too well known.

"Guilty," was his plea when arraigned.
"What do you want this time?" the court asked; "would you like to go down for thirty days?" "I'm satisfied with anything you choose to give me," he answered. "Thirty days," said the court.

John Lewis, a young man who says his home is at Aidwick, Md., was arraigned on charge of vagrancy.
"He has been loitering about Kernan's Theater and in bar rooms," said the police-man who arrested him, "and I don't believe he would work if he could get it." The policeman also said that John had a small boy begging for him. "And," said another officer, "his pal has been sent to the penitentiary.' John claimed that he sold songs and held horses about Pennsylvania avenue and 11th street. He denied the other charges. "Why don't you go back home?" he was

"There's no work for me on the farm low," was his response. His personal bonds were taken. John Webb has been here three weeks and has spent ten days on the farm. He was released Tuesday and today he was sent back for a month. William Kearney was the last one in the little gathering and he went down because he could not pay $5 for having been dis-called congestion and it is one of the dangers of the present outbreak of grip. It affects lungs, Congestion unrelieved becomes inflammation and every intelligent person knows what that means when the centers of life are affected. That growing soreness across the chest, that painful sense of fullness in the head, are signs that the grip has laid its clutches upon you. "Please send me six bottles of Duffy's Pure and we must have it." Congested organs are relieved of their surplus of blood, the circulation is equalized, the appetite sharpened and the digestion improved by this wholesome and helpful stimulant. That explains its unbroken success in cases of grip.

Malt Whisky," writes Mr. E. Alexander of Mal-vern, Iowa; "it is the best medicine for the grip

Nothing which does less will ward off the grip and no product of mortal skill can do more. Subjected to the stern test of experience Duffy's Pure Malt Whisky has established itself firmly in the MINISTER GRAY DEAD.

A Victim of Pneumonia, Developed From a Cold Contracted Here.

Issac P. Gray, U. S. minister to Mexico, died in the City of Mexico last evening from pneumonia. He had arrived in the morning. The Pullman car conductor found him unconscious at 2 o'clock yesterday morning. He was carried from the train on a stretcher to the American Hospital. The physician in attendance informed Mrs. Gray that he would not live the day out. He was unconscious and remained so ever since his arrival, and rec-

Much sorrow was expressed by the death of Minister Gray at the City of Mexico. But a few days ago he was on the floor of the House, seemingly in the best of health. Minister Gray told his friends here that he was pleased with his new line of public friendly relations between the United States and Mexico. He felt confident the difficulties between Mexico and Guatemala would be adjusted without resort to arms. The Indiana delegation in Congress will hold a meeting today to take appropriate action, an unusual honor to the memory of a public man not member or an ex-member of Congress.
